Wouldn't Push Car, Man, 65, Charges Youths Beat Him

A man who wouldn't help push a car charged that he was beaten by two 18-year-old youths Saturday night.

Philip S. Proctor, about 65, of Washington, D. C., charged Harrison P. Butturff and Seth S. Crippen, both of Arlington, Va., with assault and battery. Butturff was also charged with destruction of property.

Deputy Sheriff S. Mark Pratt said Proctor reported visiting the Cornfield Harbor residence of one of the boy's relatives. When a third youth went to get soft drinks and couldn't start his car, Proctor refused to push the car, he reported, and was beaten by the two young men. Butturff also broke two windows in his car, Proctor charged.

The victim suffered a lacerated jaw, broken tooth and nose bruise, the deputy reported. Proctor, a retired employee of the Department of Internal Revenue, is a frequent camper in the County's bay area.
